

100 Year History of the Connecticut DOT

Description

FHI produced a comprehensive account of the history of the Connecticut Department of Transportation oriented toward public distribution and appreciation. Produced for the Department's centennial anniversary, the document traced the evolution of transportation in the state, providing a contextual setting for the development of state and federal regulation and administration of transportation. The work involved archival research at numerous repositories, data management and synthesis, interviews with past and present employees and historians, reproduction of historic documents/maps/photos, narrative writing, graphic layout, and coordination of printing.
