

Orange County Transit Development Study

Orange County, New York

Description

FHI was part of a team conducting an evaluation of public transit opportunities with Orange County. FHI's role in the project included identification of existing transit services within the County, including service areas, usage figures, schedule information. FHI developed a GIS database of transit operations within the County and subsequently provided an analysis of service overlaps and deficiencies.

Client

Orange County Department of Planning

