

Environmental Resources Chapter

Town of Darien, Connecticut

Description

FHI was selected to prepare the Environmental Resources Chapter of the Town of Darien's Update to the Plan of Conservation and Development. For this project, FHI assessed the Town's existing environmental resources including rivers, streams, wetlands, aquifers, floodplains, and coastal resources. For these resources, we reviewed and evaluated current resource protection measures and practices, and drafted recommendations for strengthening environmental resource protection and management. Since coastal resources are of particular concern to Darien, our work included strategies for restoration and protection of the Long Island Sound ecosystem and habitats along the town's shoreline.
