

Durham Pedestrian Plan Durham, North Carolina

Description

Fitzgerald & Halliday, Inc. (FHI) was part of a project team tasked with developing a citywide pedestrian plan for the City of Durham, North Carolina. FHI's role on the project included participation in public outreach activities and assessment of existing city programs on educational or enforcement activities geared toward pedestrians. FHI also performed an audit of existing land use ordinances and forwarded a series of recommended changes that would allow for mixed-use development patterns and pedestrian infrastructure improvements as re-development or infill development occurs. As part of the preparation of final plan documents, FHI staff helped prepare the recommendations for prioritized improvements to the pedestrian infrastructure.
